

A dynamic forum for researchers & professionals in health sociology, health care, health policy, public health & social work

An international, scholarly, peer reviewed journal, Health Sociology Review explores the contribution of sociology and sociological research methods to the understanding of health and illness; to health policy, promotion and practice; and to equity, social justice, social policy and social work.

Now in its twelfth volume, Health Sociology Review is published in association with The Australian Sociological Association (TASA).

Health Sociology Review publishes original theoretical and research articles; case studies; symposia; commentaries; and book reviews. The aims & scope reflect a global approach to health sociology, while retaining a focus on Australian, New Zealand and Asia Pacific regional content, methodology and comparative studies. Published twice annually, each issue contains a section of topic-based articles.

Health Sociology Review is indexed in APAIS - Australian Public Affairs Information Service and AMI - Australian Medical Index. It is listed with DEST - Commonwealth Department of Education, Science and Training as a refereed journal. The journal was formerly published as The Annual Review of Health Social Sciences.

The Health Sociology Review website (www.healthsociologyreview.com) provides free educational content including editorials, abstracts of articles, sample papers, book reviews, text searches, author guidelines and subscription details.
