"Rob White has been a profound, passionate and prolific writer on a range of topics that become more important every day. This book brings together some of his key contributions to the fields of green criminology and environmental sociology, and provides an essential guide to what the author describes as the 'why's, who's and how's of environmental harms'."

Nigel South, University of Essex

"This book is bound to inspire further research and theorizing within green criminology and underlines why this is such an urgent field of inquiry."

Ragnhild Sollund, University of Oslo

"This book is a powerful tool to support students and researchers conceptualizing green criminology. Anyone interested in conservation and green criminology needs to read this book."

Rebecca W.Y. Wong, City University of Hong Kong

Theorising Green Criminology

Selected Essays

Rob White

Rob White's pioneering work in the establishment and growth of Green Criminology has been part of a paradigm shift for the field of criminology as it has moved to include crimes committed against the environment. For the first time, this book brings together a selection of White's essays that explore the theories, research approaches and concepts that have been instrumental to our understanding of environmental harm and eco-justice.

This is essential reading for all those engaged with Green Criminology, as well as Criminological Theory, Eco-Justice and Environment and Sustainability Studies.
